Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

In its monetary policy meeting in May the central bank left interest rates unchanged with two members of the committee favouring an interest rate cut. This dovish tilt from the SARB is at the back of generally dovish leading global central banks with the US Fed intimating policy easing in the course of 2019. This benign interest rate outlook from the SARB as well as other central banks and a positive electoral outcome was the wind beneath the wings of local bond yields with bond yields compressing by about 50 basis points in the course of the quarter. We kept the fund's duration at 100% relative to the benchmark during the quarter as volatility and uncertainty abound.

Market overview

For much of the second quarter three themes dominated the local bond market: -

local politics
dovish tilt from central banks trade tensions between the US and China

Leading to the national general election which were held in early May, South Africa was in a grip of political noise. For the markets the concern was about the nature of the electoral outcome as the ruling ANC was subjected to internal strife with a significant element within the party pushing for populist policies that would further weaken the fiscus and frustrate plans for prudent fiscal management and economic resuscitation as envisaged by President Ramaphosa. The ANC won the elections albeit with a reduced majority (57.6%), however the markets were satisfied with the outcome as they deemed the electoral mandate given to the President significant enough for him to begin pursuing the reform agenda he campaigned on. Following his election and in his first address to the nation the President outlined seven key objectives of his administration, i.e.: -

Economic transformation and job creation
Education, skills and health
Consolidating the social wage through reliable and quality basic services
Spatial integration, human settlements and local government
Social cohesion and safe communities
A capable, ethical and developmental state
A better Africa and World

The President spoke tough on corruption, announcing the establishment of a Special Tribunal to fast track claims arising out of the Special Investigation Unit and where possible to attach assets of individuals found guilty of corruption and return the proceeds of crime to national coffers. However, his speech was a little disappointing as it did not announce detailed plans on how to turn around Eskom, whose financial stability will underpin the much-needed supply of electricity to propel this economic rejuvenation envisaged by the President. Instead the President announced further financial assistance to the utility that would put pressure on the already strained fiscus.

Looking ahead

We kept the fund's duration in line with that of the benchmark as we considered the volatility and uncertainties in the local bond market during the quarter. We believe that risks to sovereign downgrade remain, however the rating agents are prepared to give the new administration time to ring in the envisaged changes. We therefore do not believe that credit downgrade risks are imminent and as such we will trade the 100 -110% duration range as opportunities avail themselves. We expect bond yields to be fairly compressed going forward with the SAGB10 trading in a 8.50% - 9.10 % range and fair value at 8.80%.
