Transaction Costs	0.00%	0.00%
Total Investment Charge	1.73%	1.03%

Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The fund's net asset value was driven higher by robust equity markets, underpinned by downward trending inflation data, solid corporate profits, and resilient macroeconomic data. Geopolitical tensions and a potential US government debt default were largely brushed aside by investors.

Stock selection was broadly in line with the MSCI All Country World index. Market performance was dominated by hefty gains in a small group of "magnificent seven" monopolistic US Tech stocks (Apple, Microsoft, Google, Amazon, NVIDIA, Meta and Tesla). The fund kept up as it held four of them in size (Microsoft, Google, Amazon and Meta). The fund's weakest performers were companies with relatively high exposure to China (Estee Lauder, Alibaba, Tencent and Nike) as the post-pandemic economic reopening came off the boil. The quarter was an illustration of the benefits of diversifying across different industries and geographies. Many of this quarter's top performers were at the bottom of the pack last year.

Market overview

Global equities gained over +25% since mid-October. The nine-month rebound is either the longest bear market rally (i.e., a bounce within a longer-term downtrend) in history or the start of a new bull market. The three longest bear market rallies since 1928 were five months in 1929, six months in 2001 and seven months in 1938. This does not preclude a bull market that is short in lifespan. But it does provide hope that the October low may not be revisited, especially if inflation is perceived to be brought under control.

The mega-cap tech rally over the quarter and year-to-date has been a key driver in 2023. It can be attributed to: A new-found focus on cost efficiency by these firms in response to the share price slump in 2022; Stabilisation in ecommerce and digital advertising demand following a post-pandemic lockdown hangover; Artificial intelligence app launches that provided the speculative rocket fuel for the AI winners – mega-cap tech.

Unlike the dotcom bubble of the late 1990s, the current upward move in tech stocks is being led by highly profitable companies trading on realistic valuations. Encouragingly, market performance had started to broaden out to other sectors in June (including industrials and materials), which makes the rally more sustainable and less dependent on a single investment theme.

Looking ahead

Several of the fund's analysts visited the US during the months of May and June to meet company management and check the economic temperature. Their feedback was that corporates are not seeing any meaningful and imminent drop off in demand. A healthy jobs market is providing consumers with the confidence to go out and spend, despite the higher cost of living. This contrasts with the consensus top-down view that remains concerned about the risk to the economy and financial markets resulting from tighter monetary policy.

Beyond making a macro call on whether the global economy is headed for a soft or hard landing, we are reassured about the strength of the franchises invested in the fund. Although no company is an island (to paraphrase), our focus on owning businesses with a sustainable competitive edge, growth markets and strong balance sheets means that they will live another day even if the more pessimistic top-down view pans out.
