Based on period from:	01/01/2023
Total Expense	1.50%
Transaction Costs	0.03%
Total Investment Charge	1.53%
1 Year Total Expense	1.54%

Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

Over the quarter, the fund's return lagged the benchmark. The underperformance was driven primarily by the global equity allocation. Overall, asset allocation had a neutral impact during the period.

Within global equities, sector performance was mixed. Healthcare emerged as the strongest performer in Q4 following a challenging year. Although our sector allocation was broadly neutral, we benefited from strong stock selection - most notably in Eli Lilly, Thermo Fisher, and Elevance - all of which delivered robust gains. Additional areas of relative outperformance included communication services, led by Alphabet, and consumer discretionary, driven by LVMH. Stock selection within financials, information technology, and industrials weighed on relative results. In financials, Fiserv was a significant detractor after a sharp sell-off following a meaningful downgrade in earnings guidance. Although the position was exited in late November, it remained a drag on quarterly performance. Not owning European banks also detracted within the sector. From a regional perspective, our overweight to Europe added value. Conversely, overweight positions in both the US and China detracted from performance. The fixed income component delivered a positive return in the fourth quarter, in line with the overnight cash benchmark. Short yields, sub-1 year which are more sensitive to interest rate movements are expected to fall further in line with interest rate cuts from the Fed which should lead to a steepening of the money market curve, something which we have not seen for a number of quarters. The defensive duration positioning has been retained over the quarter, and indeed for the year due to the negative yield differential out to five-years on the curve relative to the fund's cash benchmark. The exposure to investment grade credit has been increased throughout the year, and whilst yield spreads are historically tight, the demand for credit continues which should, barring a risk off event, keep yield spreads anchored.

Market overview

2025 will be remembered as a period defined by resilience, reinvention, and broad-based strength across global markets. What stood out most was not the absence of uncertainty, but rather the market's ability to absorb it. Despite political shifts, heightened geopolitical tensions, advances in artificial intelligence (AI), and meaningful policy pivots, investors were rewarded favourably on both an absolute and inflation adjusted basis.

Equities staged one of the more dramatic turnarounds in recent memory. After an unusually sharp first-half drawdown, largely because of Trump's higher than anticipated tariffs announced on the 2nd of April, or 'Liberation Day', markets regained their footing and then accelerated, finishing with broad-based gains across regions. Europe reasserted itself as cyclical and industrials benefitted from more attractive starting valuations and policy support via increased fiscal stimulus which focuses on boosting growth, competitiveness, and defence through increased public investment and easier monetary policy by way of lower interest rates. US equities delivered strong returns once again, but what defined the year was the broadening of participation across sectors and regions. Emerging markets handsomely outperformed developed markets, and Technology lagged sectors such as Financials, Materials and Telecommunications; a rare event over the past decade, supported by a weaker US Dollar and lower interest rates globally. AI moved from promise to signs of being a material economic driver through the commencement of productivity gains, whilst central banks, most notably the US Federal Reserve, shifted toward accommodation, supporting valuations of both equities and fixed income securities, whilst reinforcing confidence in ongoing global economic growth.

Looking ahead

Global economic growth in 2026 is expected to resemble 2025, with most economies expanding, albeit below potential. The US will likely outperform again, but its growth remains uneven, driven heavily by AI-related investment while lower-income households face affordability pressures and weakening job prospects. Elsewhere, tariffs will continue to act as a headwind to growth, partly offset by policy support through further interest rate cuts and, in some cases, fiscal easing.

The investment opportunity set for 2026 remains compelling, but it calls for balance. Inflation may linger, interest-rate paths are likely to be less predictable than markets hope, and geopolitical progress remains delicate. The solution is not caution to the point of paralysis, but disciplined exposure to high-quality businesses, global diversification, and the agility to make informed decisions when markets provide the chance. With AI continuing to shape earnings, capital flows, and productivity, and with the broadening of market performance that characterised 2025, we enter the new year on a solid foundation. While history doesn't always repeat itself, another favourable year for equity markets appears likely as interest rates continue to decline, but the odds tilt toward an even choppy, more average year. This would align with past patterns in which the Federal Reserve cuts rates during a soft landing.

We maintain a neutral allocation to equities and will actively continue to tilt the tactical asset allocation in response to compelling market opportunities as they present themselves.
