A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

Equity markets ended the quarter in negative territory with the fund unable to escape the turmoil amidst heightened geopolitical tensions. The funds returns lagged the MSCI All Country World Index as growth markedly trailed value. Value and momentum factors have been outperforming growth and lowrisk factors since late 2025. This reflects a rotation away from longduration and/or capital-light businesses (software, professional services and parts of financials) towards assetheavy sectors that are perceived to be less vulnerable (industrials, power, materials, energy, transportation). Our investment style tends to favour asset-light businesses operating in expanding markets given they typically provide stable and growing free cash flow generation – the necessary ingredients for compound returns. Hence, the recent lag. Energy was the best performing sector over the quarter given the sharp spike in oil prices and having no exposure detracted from our performance. Linde added the most to the portfolio return as the stock was up almost +17%. The largest industrial gas company has been regarded as a defensive holding in a market concerned with disruption and inflation. Linde tends to increase prices at a faster rate in an inflationary market than it does in a non-inflationary market. While in 2025 Linde was pressured by weaker helium and rare gas pricing, the suspension of QatarEnergy LNG production linked to the Iran conflict and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz has partially reversed helium market dynamics. Notable detractor over the quarter was MSFT which has been caught in the anti-software sentiment. The Software & IT Services sector has been under pressure as investors fear that rapid advances in AI could erode traditional SaaS business models, compress margins, and destabilise revenue streams.

Market overview

Q1 2026 was marked by pronounced volatility. The early part of the quarter carried a risk tone, with resilient earnings, supportive macro data, and accommodative policy driving gains. This backdrop saw investors to lean into cyclicals with rotation a defining theme, as capital flowed out of large-cap technology into industrials, materials, and emerging markets. Beneath the surface, investors wrestled with Alrelated uncertainty, which fuelled sharp market swings as fears of technological displacement and disruption to established business models took hold. Headlines from the privatecredit industry, where several funds announced gating measures to restrict redemptions were unsettling. Escalating conflict in the Middle East brought a sharp reversal to the upward trajectory of equity markets and the lean into cyclicals. U.S. and Israeli strikes against Iranian assets sparked fears of a prolonged war. This disrupted traffic through the Strait of Hormuz, pushing oil prices sharply higher. While energy equities benefited from this surge, the broader market struggled under the weight of stagflation concerns. The resulting risk aversion erased earlier gains and left global equities down for the quarter.

Looking ahead

The current environment is filled with headlines about geopolitical tensions, rapid technological disruption, inflation and interest rate shifts. These stories are dominating the daily news cycle and creating sharp swings in stock prices. Looking ahead, we expect headline noise and volatility to continue. Yet volatility is not new; it is the recurring backdrop of equity markets. What matters is how we respond. Our philosophy is to remain anchored in the principle of compounding, recognising that temporary turbulence does not alter the trajectory of quality businesses with enduring competitive advantage. Periods of heightened uncertainty test investor resolve. It is tempting to react to every headline or quarterly earnings miss. However, history shows that the greatest rewards accrue to those who stay invested in companies capable of compounding value over decades. Current volatility is a reminder that patience is not passive, it is an active choice to trust in the mathematics of compound growth and the resilience of quality businesses. By staying true to this philosophy, we position ourselves not only to endure the present noise but to thrive in the long run. We remain mindful that market dislocations often present compelling entry points for longterm investors. Periods of heightened volatility as we are seeing now, while uncomfortable in the short term, allow us to add to positions in highquality businesses at valuations that do not typically prevail in more stable environments.
