Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The fund delivered a strong positive return during the second quarter of 2026, benefiting from the rebound in global equity markets. However, despite generating a double-digit gain, performance lagged the MSCI All Country World Index, primarily due to stock selection within the Information Technology sector.

The portfolio's exposure to the continued build-out of AI infrastructure through holdings such as Nvidia, Broadcom, TSMC and connector specialist Amphenol contributed positively. However, market leadership was concentrated in the more cyclical areas of the semiconductor value chain, particularly memory chip manufacturers and semiconductor capital equipment companies, which were among the strongest performers globally.

By contrast, several of the fund's enterprise software and platform holdings remained out of favour despite their attractive long-term fundamentals. Investors continued to focus on the immediate beneficiaries of AI-related capital spending, while companies such as Microsoft received less recognition as markets awaited greater clarity on how AI investments will ultimately translate into sustainable earnings growth.

During the quarter we initiated positions in Waste Management and Waste Connections, two of the three largest waste management companies in North America. Both businesses benefit from attractive industry structures characterised by economies of scale, strong pricing power and ownership of scarce landfill assets. The sector is inherently defensive, as waste collection and disposal remain essential services regardless of economic conditions. At a time when investor attention is heavily concentrated on AI-related opportunities, we believe these high-quality businesses offer an attractive contrarian opportunity while providing diversification within the portfolio.

Market overview

Global equity markets reached new record highs as robust corporate earnings and continued enthusiasm around artificial intelligence supported investor sentiment. A key driver of market performance was the accelerating pace of data centre investment by major technology companies seeking to meet rapidly growing demand for computing power.

Market sentiment also benefited from a more constructive geopolitical backdrop. A fragile but sustained ceasefire between the United States and Iran, resilient economic data and another quarter of better-than-expected corporate earnings reinforced confidence in the global economic outlook. Expectations that shipping flows through the Strait of Hormuz would remain uninterrupted contributed to a sharp decline in oil prices during the quarter, weighing on energy stocks, a commodity sector in which the fund currently has no exposure.

Looking ahead

Periods of relative underperformance can be uncomfortable, but our experience continues to reinforce the importance of maintaining discipline and remaining invested in high-quality growth businesses. Historically, attempts to rotate away from quality growth into more cyclical or value-oriented areas of the market have only added value when executed with exceptional timing. In most cases, such style rotations have detracted from long-term returns, as periods of value leadership have tended to be powerful but relatively short-lived.

One notable exception followed the bursting of the dot-com bubble, when lower-priced "old economy" companies significantly outperformed growth stocks between 2003 and 2007. That period was supported by exceptionally strong global economic growth and the China-driven commodity boom. While investors who remained committed to quality growth were ultimately rewarded, doing so required considerable patience through several years of relative underperformance.

Although a similar environment could emerge if global growth accelerates meaningfully, neither our central economic outlook nor broader market expectations suggest such conditions today.

Importantly, many high-quality companies currently trade at valuations below their historical premiums relative to the broader market, creating a potentially attractive backdrop for future outperformance. Quality businesses have historically performed particularly well in more moderate economic environments, where investors place greater value on resilient business models and consistent earnings growth than on cyclical earnings leverage.

We believe this opportunity is reflected in the fund today. Despite strong global equity market returns over the past three and a half years, many of the fund's holdings continue to trade materially below our assessment of intrinsic value. As investor attention broadens beyond the immediate beneficiaries of AI infrastructure spending, we believe the fund is well positioned to benefit from both earnings growth and valuation normalisation over the medium to long term.
