Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

Over the quarter, the fund's return lagged the benchmark. The underperformance was driven primarily by the global equity allocation. Overall, asset allocation had a neutral impact during the period.

Equity markets delivered a strong quarter, with the MSCI All Country World Index (ACWI) rising 15%, driven primarily by the semiconductor sector, which recorded its strongest quarterly performance on record. While the Fund participated meaningfully in the market rally, it underperformed the benchmark. The relative underperformance was largely attributable to semiconductor stock selection. Although we maintained an overweight position in the sector, our holdings lagged the broader semiconductor universe as a small number of stocks that we did not own, particularly in the memory and wafer fabrication equipment segments, generated exceptional returns during the quarter. Elsewhere, stock selection within the Communication Services, Industrials and Consumer Discretionary sectors contributed positively to relative performance. Our positioning in Materials, supported by both allocation and stock selection decisions, also added value. In addition, the Fund benefited from its underweight exposure to Energy, as oil prices declined following an easing of geopolitical tensions and renewed peace discussions between the United States and Iran.

The rise in yields, driven by persistent inflationary pressures and continued hawkish rhetoric from the Federal Reserve, provided an opportunity to modestly extend the Fund's duration in interest bearing securities during the quarter. While we have taken advantage of higher yields, we remain mindful that rates could move higher in the near term, which would present a further opportunity to add duration at more attractive levels. The Fund's high-yield allocation has been maintained at approximately 6.5%, with the majority of this exposure invested in South African government bonds, which continue to offer a meaningful yield premium relative to the benchmark. In contrast, US investment-grade credit spreads remain exceptionally tight, providing limited scope for additional yield enhancement and less compelling risk-adjusted value in the current environment.

Market overview

The second quarter of 2026 was characterised by a notable improvement in the geopolitical backdrop, specifically the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) between the United States and Iran. This agreement represents a significant de-escalation of what had previously been one of the most acute geopolitical risks facing global markets. While many challenging issues still need to be negotiated during the agreed two-month ceasefire period - and likely beyond - the immediate cessation of military hostilities has led investor sentiment to improve considerably. Global equity markets rebounded strongly in the second quarter, supported by resilient economic fundamentals and the belief that supply disruptions associated with hostilities in the Middle East would be short lived. The MSCI ACWI rose by 15.3%. Emerging markets were among the standout performers in the quarter. However, a closer look at the composition of returns reveals that less than a handful of companies - namely Samsung Electronics, SK Hynix, and Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company - accounted for the lion's share of the region's gains. A defining feature of the quarter was the clear rotation back into growth-oriented sectors, particularly Information Technology (IT). The IT sector delivered a return of 39%, far exceeding the broader market and underlining strong investor conviction in long-term structural themes.

Looking ahead

Global economic growth remains resilient, supported by strong private sector investment and substantial spending by US hyperscalers on cloud and data centre infrastructure which are powerful drivers of activity and a tailwind for corporate earnings. Central banks are likely to balance the need to contain inflation with the recognition that many recent inflationary pressures are temporary, reinforcing the need for patience as the disinflationary process is underway but not yet complete. Despite some elevated valuations, we have increased our tactical exposure to global equities to an overweight position, while maintaining a disciplined and diversified approach to portfolio construction. We believe that improving geopolitical conditions, resilient economic growth, and strong corporate earnings provide a compelling case for maintaining a constructive stance on risk assets as we move into the second half of the year.
