A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The High Alpha Fund returned 7.0% for the quarter and the B1 class is up 19.4% for the 2021 calendar year against the FTSE / JSE Capped Swix return of 8.7% and 27.1% over the corresponding periods. The fund's best performing sectors for the quarter were the consumer discretionary, basic materials, and telecommunications sectors. The top performing stocks were Richemont, Anglo and Impala Platinum, Anglo American and BHP Billiton.

Market overview

South African Equity advanced 8.7% in the fourth quarter of 2021, as measured by the FTSE / JSE Capped Swix index. The quarter was very volatile with both global and domestic news flow and events impacting markets. The most notable events over the quarter were the discovery of the Covid variant Omicron and the FED's shift to a hawkish stance. The variant Omicron was discovered in South Africa in November and caused panic as borders were closed and the threat of hard lockdowns become a reality again. Southern African counties were placed on red lists which perpetuated in a big sell off in South African capital markets. The variant appeared to be far more transmittable than previous variants given the steep fourth wave that South Africa entered, but the severity was uncertain. Subsequently, data has suggested that vaccines still show efficacy, albeit less efficacy in terms of transmissions, but importantly, the mortality and severity of the cases seems to be milder and hospitalization rates appear to be well under control. As the data become significant in December, markets rallied on the back of lower probabilities of hard lockdowns and threats to the global economic recovery. While the world was trying to assess the risks of Omicron, the FED changed course on their view of inflation being transitory, with Jerome Powell saying "it is time to retire the word transitory" when referring to inflation. This caused ructions in capital markets as tapering and interest rate hikes appeared to be moving faster than initially anticipated. Most of the selloff came in the growth stocks with very high valuations that were driven by cheap money. Despite the risks to interest rates rising faster than initially anticipated, global growth still appears to be intact, which should support equities that are reasonably priced. Domestic growth in South Africa will remain below the required level to meaningfully reduce unemployment and drive sustainable growth that domestic companies require to generate optimal returns on capital for the foreseeable future. Having said that, South African equity trades on valuations that appear to be attractive in the global context despite the structural economic headwinds. Many of the companies have successfully managed their way through the lockdowns and balance sheets domestically appear to be very healthy. As we move through 2022, the base effects for earnings will become tougher. Much of the easy money has been made through the rerating of stocks in anticipation of earnings recoveries. Despite earnings surprise risk and rising interest rates, we have a positive outlook on South African Equities based on their valuations.

Looking ahead

2021 proved to be a very good year for risk assets in general. The recovery from the hard lockdowns in 2020 has been robust and most companies have navigated their way through the uncertain times. Much of the rerating of SA equities has happened in 2021 and now the delivery of earnings growth is paramount. SA equity valuations appear attractive relative to history and peers and underpins our positive view on the asset class despite the risks of rising interest rates. In uncertain times, diversification and risk management are of utmost importance. We remain focussed on stock selection and long-term value creation.
