Total Expense	1.56%
Transaction Costs	0.08%
Total Investment Charge	1.64%

Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The fund NAV hit new highs in the final quarter of 2021, driven by robust equity markets and by a positive stock selection contribution.

The share prices of the two US health insurance holdings, UnitedHealth and Anthem, were especially strong following better than expected quarterly earnings reports. Both companies are long-term beneficiaries of the steady rise in healthcare costs as the US population ages and more people are diagnosed with chronic conditions. Microsoft, the largest holding in the fund, saw its shares hit new all-time highs on corporate results that convincingly beat expectations across its key businesses. Its cloud computing Azure business (21% of revenue) was the standout, recording +48% year-on-year revenue growth. Estee Lauder also contributed to the fund performance, driven by an upbeat outlook by its management team on the demand for premium cosmetics. On the debit side, the share prices of three of the fund's Asia-centric holdings were weak: Chinese e-commerce giant Alibaba, India bank HDFC, and Asian life insurer Prudential. Soft domestic macroeconomic conditions, regulatory threats, intensifying competition and COVID restrictions weighed on these names.

The holding in Unilever was sold. As well as being exposed to a number of slow growing product categories, local competition has stepped up in several of its key regional markets. Unilever's current management have been too timid in reshaping the product portfolio towards segments with growth and pricing power. The decision to focus on profit margins, at the expense of investing in growth, has come home to roost. We would consider reinvesting to Unilever at a future date if there is a change in strategy, but this would likely require a new management team.

Market overview

Global equity investors were wearing Kevlar vests in Q4 2021. The emerging Omicron-variant wave, soaring inflation numbers and a hawkish Fed ended up being mere speedbumps. Instead, equity markets were driven by strong corporate earnings growth, healthy jobs data and easing supply chain constraints. Information technology, particularly hardware and semiconductors, was the strongest performing of the major industry sectors. "Bond-proxy" sectors (including utilities, real estate and consumer staples) also outperformed as the caution and restrictions imposed by the Omicron outbreak tempered economic growth expectations. The relative outperformance of US stocks (MSCI USA up +10% in Q4) over the rest of the world (MSCI All Country World ex USA up +2%) continues to be a feature.

Looking ahead

During the first COVID wave in early 2020, central banks and governments threw in the kitchen sink. They undertook huge bond buying programmes and furlough schemes to ensure voters made it through a self-imposed recession. By-and-large their gambit worked.

Today the challenge is too much growth, not too little. Price inflation is tracking well above central bank targets. Much of this can be attributed to COVID-related disruptions, but the longer it persists the more likely higher inflation expectations will be imbedded in the collective psyche. Central banks have responded by slowly withdrawing the monetary punchbowl from the party before they risk losing their greatest asset - their credibility.

The Federal Reserve has signalled as many as three rate rises this year. History suggests monetary tightening is not usually a problem for stock markets as it often coincides with a strong economy and, by extension, above trend corporate earnings growth. We are braced for near-term choppiness (particularly if the inflation data remains elevated) but we should also expect positive returns over a 12 to 18-month time horizon. There are already signs of easing supply bottlenecks and levelling off energy prices. Once COVID-related uncertainty subsides, corporate earnings are likely to benefit from a pent-up demand boost from "going out" consumer spending and from businesses deploying their contingency cash reserves into long term projects.
