A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The fund is up 0.9% for the quarter, dragged down by September's sell off. In addition to a positive return from the offshore assets, we have seen good returns from financials (especially Capitec and FirstRand), Mondi and Spar. These companies all reported better than expected earnings and show that companies that have become too cheap will recover sharply if they demonstrate steady performance in this difficult environment. Over one year the fund is up 3.7%, and for the six-month period the return is nearly 14% off the lows of April. In the quarter we sold out of Woolworths as the uncertain consumer outlook and SA and Australia have pushed out the turnaround. We added Vodacom – which continues to generate very steady margins and cashflows and Netcare – which should benefit from the resumption of elective procedures as new ideas.

Market overview

2020 has truly been a roller coaster ride and would have tested the nerves of even the most experienced and sanguine investors. After one of the severest and deepest recessions in history, global equity markets have rebounded by more than 50% from their lows in March. The sheer magnitude of fiscal and monetary policy stimulus measures implemented appear to have staved off what could have been a more prolonged and painful recession. Investment markets however lost some steam towards the end of the third quarter as forward-looking growth indicators in the services sectors trended lower in regions with an increase in coronavirus infections. Furthermore, risks to additional fiscal policy support have increased in the US with political wrangling over additional income support for individuals and small businesses raising concerns about an abrupt slowdown in consumer spending. September's correction is a reminder of just how fragile and dependant financial markets have become of stimulus measures as well as the outlook for COVID-19 infections, but it also highlights the importance of being selective when making investment decisions as growth going forward will be more constrained in an environment of strained balance sheets and cautious consumer behaviour.

In South Africa, the FTSE JSE All Share and Capped SWIX indices followed global markets lower and lost -1.6% and -1.1% respectively. The domestic equity market did however outperform international markets and EM peers. The sell-off was concentrated in the resources sector with precious metals coming under some selling pressure. Domestic orientated stocks had a reasonable month for a change. The ZAR at one point nearly breached the R16 to the USD level, but lost some momentum towards the end of the month on the back of increased global market volatility. Even so, the domestic currency managed to gain ground relative to the major currencies. South African government bonds were unchanged for the month. Similarly to the ZAR, bonds also sold off in the last week of the month while funding concerns surfaced again when Government instructed National Treasury to support SAA with an additional R10.5bn.

Looking ahead

While policy makers globally remain cautious about the growth outlook and in no mood to withdraw stimulus measures any time soon, risk assets are expected to remain supported. Investors need to be selective as not all companies are expected to flourish in a post-COVID-19 world. Consumer spending patterns and behaviour are expected to change (perhaps permanently) and companies will be hesitant to invest aggressively after one of the deepest recessions in history. Strained balance sheets will act as a restraint to some companies' ability and willingness to spend on new investments or bulking up their workforce. Unprecedented support from policy makers has been essential, but this too will reverse at some point, and only then will the full impact of the crisis be fully revealed.
