Fund review

The fund is up 5.7% for the quarter and 7.2% for the year of 2020. Financials continued their strong recovery, as did real estate. This was a return that would have surprised most investors given the extent of economic damage caused by COVID-19 both globally and in SA. However, the returns remained very skewed to growth companies – Naspers/Prosus locally and technology offshore. Even after the strong bounce in the last quarter, the banks, real estate and retailers are down 20% for the year.

South African assets benefited from the improvement in risk appetite during the fourth quarter, with the Rand appreciating by 14% against the USD and the FTSE ALSI outperforming the MSCI ACWI by 10%. For the year, the ZAR only lost 4.7% against the USD. Even though SA's fiscal outlook deteriorated and the country lost its investment credit rating, the Fund's domestic bond were up 6.4% for the quarter and more than 7% for the year.

ZAR strength meant the offshore holdings fell slightly for the quarter, but for the full year the offshore holdings were up 24.9%. Our MD Global Equity Fund remains well ahead of its peer group and benchmark for the year. The fund tends to be structurally underweight highly operationally leveraged investments (e.g. oil companies, miners, banks, heavy industrials) given our long-term bias to companies with stable earnings profiles. Hence, the fund typically lags at the early stages of an economic recovery.

Market overview

Despite the second wave of COVID-19 cases, equity markets globally and domestically appear to be looking through the case numbers and focusing on the economic recovery post the pandemic induced lockdowns as the vaccine rollout commences. We remain cautious domestically as South Africa does not have any headroom for severe lockdowns and news flow on the vaccine rollout has been slow. Internationally the valuations look stretched and appear to be fully discounting an improved environment.

The US election outcome, although turbulent has been viewed as positive for emerging markets, which outperformed most developed markets in the final quarter of 2020 as the risk on trade began. The Democrats have won, but by a fairly narrow margin, which does constrain their ability to hike taxes or pursue other "market unfriendly" policies.

If we compare South African equities to their emerging market peers, there could be some catch up moving into 2021 should the risk on trade continue given the underperformance in 2020. Should the risk on trade continue, we could expect to see domestic stocks continue their rally in the near term. We do however need to see the recovery in domestic earnings to make the rally sustainable given current valuations post the rebound in the last quarter of 2020.

Looking ahead

As we continue through company updates, we are finding that many of the high-quality businesses continue to print results that are better than forecast and show balance sheet resilience. Post the rally in domestic and global equities in the last quarter of 2020, the focus turns to the earnings recovery to justify the reratings.

Our businesses have sustainable competitive advantages, consistent cash flow generation and conservative financial leverage that ensure they can withstand the toughest of economic recessions.

Moving into 2021, we expect more volatility. With the second wave growing at an alarming rate, we will need to use some lessons learnt in 2020 to navigate the year. The vaccine rollout is key to economic recovery, both locally and globally. Large asset price movements do present opportunities and we are alert to these. Now, more than ever, stock selection and diversification are paramount.
