Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

- The Fund's performance for the third quarter was -8.13% (A Class) and -7.95% (X Class), slightly behind the benchmark return of -7.45%.
- Year-to-date performance is -12.79% (A Class) and -12.26% (X Class), ahead of the benchmark return of -13.42%.
- The Fund continues to markedly outperform Peer Groups: EAA GBP Diversified Bond and EAA GBP Flexible Bond which are down -20.81% and -15.86% respectively year-to-date.

Market overview

The rout in global government bond markets continued unabated in the third quarter with yields rising sharply in reaction to ongoing extreme inflationary pressures and therefore, increasingly 'hawkish' central banks. Earlier hopes that weakening economic data would convince central banks to adopt less aggressive tightening cycles had cold water thrown on it in July when the US Federal Reserve committed to 'do whatever it takes' to bring inflation back in line. This monetary policy mantra has been quickly adopted on a global scale and interest rate expectations continue to climb despite the clear negative ramifications for future economic growth conditions as lowering inflation has become overwhelmingly more important than achieving a 'soft landing'. Having become accustomed to the luxury of predictable central bank 'forward guidance' and absence of inflationary pressures for many years, global bond markets are now contending with heightened uncertainty on both fronts and their reaction has been distinctly negative.

Looking ahead

The UK government bond market has significantly repriced the outlook for tighter monetary policy leading to a marked shift higher in yields across the curve. Whilst global bond yields have been rising in anticipation of further central bank tightening, the UK market has severely underperformed other major developed markets such as US and Germany over the quarter. So why has this been the case? Like other central banks, the Bank of England's (BOE) main objective is to implement measures to bring inflation back under control and towards its long-term target of 2%. The BOE has raised rates seven times in the current cycle with the most recent rise of 50 basis points taking base rate to 2.25%, although so far has had little effect on dampening consumer demand in the economy. However, it is not just a story about demand, other factors such as elevated labour costs and high energy prices have driven inflation higher with the headline rate hovering around a 40 year high of 10% in August. The fragility of the bond market was compounded further following the release of the "new" Conservative government's "go for growth" mini budget. This unorthodox measure of less tax receipts (income) and higher spending at a time when UK finances are already elevated by emergency spending due to the pandemic as well as soaring energy prices caused extreme volatility in the bond market with the 30-year Gilt experiencing its highest daily price swing on record, causing the BOE to intervene. It is difficult to forecast where base rate will end the year, but our current thinking is that we should receive a further 150 to 200 basis points of tightening, which will take the base rate to between 3.75% and 4.25%, with further tightening in 2023.

The Fund has maintained an underweight exposure to duration (interest rate risk) which has added relative value, however the moderate overweight exposure to Sterling has been a headwind for returns. Whilst there is no doubt the market has already discounted a significant amount of monetary tightening, the new budget does put upward pressure on inflation leading to higher bond yields, so we are comfortable to be patient and wait for a better opportunity to increase duration towards benchmark weighting.
