Based on period from:	01/01/2020
Total Expense	1.52%
Transaction Costs	0.08%
Total Investment Charge	1.60%
1 Year Total Expense	1.51%

Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

The fund's net asset value rebounded, driven by a relief rally that followed heavy market selloffs in prior quarters. Stock selection enabled the fund to outperform the MSCI All Country World benchmark index. Notable contributors included Nike (better than expected sales amidst an inventory glut), JPMorgan (strong net interest income) and Tencent (easing Covid-related restrictions and regulatory backdrop).

The large holding in US health insurance company Elevance was reduced. The sector tends to underperform in the two-year lead-up to US presidential elections (next election in November 2024) as uncertainty over healthcare policy is stoked by campaign pledges. Beyond election cyclical we remain positive about the prospects for Elevance and its rival UnitedHealth because they continue to garner a larger slice of the Medicare/Medicaid pie and they profit from the ongoing growth in health spending as populations age and more treatments become available. The proceeds from reducing Elevance were used to buy an initial stake in Thermo Fisher. This "one-stop shop" life science tools and services business also benefits from rising healthcare spending but has less political risk.

Market overview

Global stock markets were boosted by hopes the Federal Reserve would temper its hawkishness. This expectation was fueled by the release of lower than anticipated US inflation data. In addition, corporate earnings reports were mixed but not as bad as feared. Some companies successfully leapt over a low-set bar. For example, US banks reported solid profits that were supported by strong net interest income amidst a higher rate environment. Others tripped over. Notable amongst these were Big Tech names such as Microsoft, Alphabet, Amazon and Meta Platforms. Demand for their services proved to be less resilient than investors had hoped as customers tightened their belts. Chinese stocks exhibited a powerful rebound in anticipation of easier Covid restrictions leading to a substantial pick-up in economic activity.

The waxing and waning of industry-sector and regional performance is why it pays to be diversified. In doing so the portfolio limits the need to flip-flop between short-term performance trends. This enables compound returns to be generated by holding quality investments through the ups and downs rather than cutting-and-running (often at the wrong time in hindsight) when they are temporarily out of favour.

Looking ahead

2023 beckons for quality-growth stocks (to which the portfolio has a bias). The tighter monetary policy backdrop is starting to bite into demand, albeit mitigated by healthy consumer savings and solid corporate balance sheets. As a result, there will be far fewer companies compared to recent years that can grow revenue and cash flows at a robust clip. It makes sense to pay a premium for growth when it is scarce. It doubly makes sense when the same stocks have devalued over the past year.

More importantly, beyond the business cycle perspective, there is empirical evidence to show quality strategies provide better risk-adjusted returns than more speculative investments. This anomaly is due to persistent demand for high-risk stocks that offer embedded leverage (i.e., similar returns to buying on margin) and lottery characteristics. Retail investors are drawn to moon-shots that will be the next Apple or Tesla. This persistent over-bidding of high-risk investments is well underpinned by human nature (i.e., greed) and by investors seeking to gamble insufficient savings to meet future retirement needs amidst a low return world. The meme stock boom-and-bust is the most recent example. The upshot is that the fund's "boring" quality-growth shares can continue to deliver better outcomes for patient investors.
