Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

The High Alpha Fund returned 10.5% for the 4th quarter and -1.4% for the 2022 calendar year. The domestic equity portion of the portfolio returned 12.1% for the quarter and -0.1% for the year against the FTSE/JSE Capped SWIX which returned 12.2% and 4.4% over the corresponding periods. The offshore equity portion of the portfolio returned 4.0% in rands for the quarter and -11.8% in rands for the year against the MSCI ACWI which returned 3.9% and -13.0% over the corresponding periods.

The fund's best performing sectors for the quarter were Technology (25.1%), Basic Materials (18.3%) and Real Estate (11.8%). Market overview

Despite global central banks' best efforts to reduce inflation by slowing demand growth with tighter monetary policy, risk assets made a comeback during the fourth quarter of 2022. The US dollar lost its shine, giving back some of its outperformance over the past year, leading to the ZAR strengthening by 6.2% against the USD for the quarter and improving the one-year decline to 6.5%. The bounce from the October lows was due to investors focusing on the improved outlook for inflation as consumer goods, food and energy prices all eased. An important development, as high and stubborn inflation coupled with a vibrant labour market, have resulted in one of the most aggressive interest rate hiking cycles in recent history. Additional factors that contributed to the bounce in equity markets are the prospect of less restrictive COVID-19 measures in China and a significant decline in the price of natural gas in Europe. Performance in December was softer than the quarter with the MSCI ACWI down 3.8%, but up 3.9% for the quarter. Consistent with the theme of 2022, the weakness was largely related to the outlook for interest rates (the Fed raised rates by the expected 50bps in December, however the commentary remained hawkish). Powell indicated that he does not foresee rates being lowered, until they are confident that inflation is moving lower and staying at those levels. Stocks remain sensitive to any perceived changes in Fed policy. Both the FTSE/JSE All Share Index and the FTSE/JSE Capped SWIX Index followed global markets lower and closed the year softer down 2.3% and 2.8% in December but gained 15.2% and 12.2% for the quarter. All major stock markets were negative in 2022 (in dollar terms) bar Greece (0.3%). The S&P 500 had its worst year since the GFC. Tech stocks have predominantly taken the brunt of the selling pressure as the rising yields environment weighed on growthier names, leading to the Nasdaq falling by over 33% in 2022.

Looking ahead

Under the conditions of elevated interest rates, the consequence is that the USA economy is set to slow. There is some expectation that this economy may enter a recession, but our view is that, if it does, it will be shallow and short. The South Africa economy is expected to grow at around the 1% GDP mark during 2023. South Africa has had to contend with several debilitating factors such as unprecedented levels of loadshedding, inter alia. The country also faces the challenges of delivering basic services and the maintenance of the country's infrastructure. Unemployment remains uncomfortably high and much higher growth rates are required to reverse this negative trend, in our view. Inflation in South Africa is also currently at levels above its upper target band of 6%. As such, rates in South Africa are expected to rise further (we expect a further 50 bps rise in rates in two equal 25 bps tranches during the January and May meetings). Thereafter, we expect rates to be held level throughout the remainder of the year. Any expectation for interest rate cuts, both in SA and the USA, are essentially left for 2024 and once inflation is within targeted bands.

Factoring in this scenario (of low economic growth and elevated interest rates), we believe it will be a difficult operating environment for many South African companies. Despite the structural economic headwinds, domestic companies are currently trading on valuation levels that appear attractive from a historical perspective. If 2024 is a year of synchronised global economic recovery and an environment of lower interest rates, these current valuation levels may represent an attractive level from which a base is formed. Having said that, the base effects for earnings will become more challenging (in a slowing growth environment) and the equity market may only benefit once it sees the end to interest rate increases (which should be by mid-year). In conclusion equity volatility is expected to continue with a more positive conviction for stronger equity returns during the second half of 2023.
