Total Expense	1.52%
Transaction Costs	0.08%
Total Investment Charge	1.60%
1 Year Total Expense	1.52%

Total Expense (TER): This ratio shows the charges, levies and fees relating to the management of the portfolio and is expressed as a percentage of the average net asset value of the portfolio, calculated over the period shown and annualised to the most recently completed quarter. A higher TER does not necessarily imply a poor return, nor does a low TER imply a good return. The current TER should not be regarded as an indication of future TERs.

Transaction Costs (TC): This ratio shows the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the buying and selling of the fund's underlying assets. TC are a necessary cost in administering the fund and impacts fund returns. It should not be considered in isolation as returns may be impacted by many other factors over time including market returns, the type of fund, investment decisions of the investment manager and the TER.

Total Investment Charges (TIC): This ratio is simply the sum of the TER and TC, showing the percentage of the value of the fund incurred as costs relating to the investment of the fund. It should be noted that performance figures account for all costs included in the TIC ratio, so you should not deduct the TIC from performance figures, the performance is already net of the TIC.

Fund review

It was a positive start to the year with the fund's net asset value increasing, driven by a more positive rhetoric around inflation and rates. The fund was able to navigate the turmoil in the banking sector, having had no exposure to US regional banks and European banks. Stock selection enabled the fund to outperform the MSCI All Country World benchmark index. Notable contributors included Meta (reduction on cost and capex outlook, and potentially less competition from Chinese owned TikTok given national security concerns), LVMH (positive outlook for the Chinese consumer coming out of lockdowns) and Keyence (good earnings report). The fund increased its exposure to China via LVMH given ongoing conviction and China reopening tailwinds. China luxury revenue was down -10% to -15% in 2022. Given pricing was up between +10% to +15% in 2022, this would imply volumes were down between -25% to -35% compared to 2019. There is significant opportunity for an acceleration of growth as the Chinese travel again (intra-city, intra-Asia and international) and a return to normalised share of global luxury spending. Travel is seen as a positive for luxury spending given the feel-good factor while on holiday. In addition, the wide price differential in Europe versus China makes shopping while travelling attractive.

Market overview

The major themes driving the rebound year to date are optimism around interest rates peaking, energy prices falling, and the view that it is a matter of time before we see the last interest rate hike of this cycle. China is coming out of lockdowns with the government focused on reviving growth. In 2022 earnings revisions rose for the year for the S&P 500, but multiple compression more than outweighed this. In 2023 this has reversed with earnings estimates down slightly, but the P/E expansion has more than offset this.

The quarter was characterised by heightened volatility stemming from stress in the banking sector. Silicon Valley Bank a US regional bank collapsed after a run on its funds driven by venture capital depositors. In the European banking sector UBS had to step in to rescue struggling Credit Suisse. The fund had no exposure to US regional banks and European banks. The turmoil in the banking sector led to sharp moves in yields as investors speculated that this stress may be enough for the Fed to limit rate hikes going forward. Measures taken to shore up financial markets helped ease concerns around the state of the banking sector.

Looking ahead

Given the turmoil in the banking sector, there has been much focus on how balance sheet risks can brew and then quickly unravel. Silicon Valley Bank and Credit Suisse are cases in point. Melville Douglas' global sector analysts formally undertake balance sheet assessments of the portfolio holdings at least once a year. Their work won't necessarily detect outright fraudulent misstatements (although we do seek out red flags regarding management integrity), but it will pick up the "gradually" aspect. Our confidence in the balance sheet strength of our holdings ensures long term value of our client savings is protected through the business cycles.

Another worry is an upcoming corporate earnings recession as slower/declining revenue growth meets higher costs. A litmus test will be the first quarter 2023 earnings announcement season. Consensus is expecting positive earnings growth for 2023. The last three earnings recessions saw peak-to-trough falls of around -20% to -40%. So, it is not unreasonable to expect further earnings downgrades. This a heavy tide for the market to swim against. Nonetheless, it could be a relatively short-term problem if cost pressures level off and the post zero-Covid recovery in China counterbalances softer western world growth. As the market outlook is finely balanced, it remains prudent to avoid swinging for fences in either direction.
